TRIP TO EUROPE

Southampton and Environs.

By JOHN S. BENDER, Esq.

Thrilled with yesterday's observation, strengthened with a quiet night's rest and English breakfast, and feeling a little quixotic, I of course was nervous for any emergency, and in company with Joseph A. Blundell, immediately prepared for a siege of

NETLEY ABBEY.

A place that we had never heard of before. This ancient Monastery is situated about 3½ miles from Southampton, on an arm of the sea, and conceals within its walls many points of interest, which, if written, would fill a volume, yet we have not time nor opportunity to dig them out.

Suffice it to say that the Abbey was erected by some Cistercian Monks who emigrated from France at the beginning of the 13th century. The inside of the building is 211 feet long by 50 feet wide. At the transepts, or wings, it is 160 feet wide, and from the ground to the summit of the gable is 80 feet. Though nearly destroyed it reveals some of the most perfect specimens of Norman Architecture. Its vaulted rooms and subterranean passages, many of which are still to be seen, impressed us with the idea that it was constructed for defense against invasion, as well as a place of worship. One room, in a partial state of preservation, with its vaulted door had something of appearance of a prison, which, for want of better information, we concluded had been used to punish refractory Monks.

The Old Roman Camp Clansentum, was not far from this, at which place there is a Castle still remaining in a fine state of preservation, and occupied by a family. From this Castle a subterranean passage is supposed to have been constructed to this Abbey. Niches are yet apparent in the walls, which are supposed at some time the world's history to have contained the bust of some patron saint, or other ancient worthy; but now, like the foot print of a human being in the solid rock, we can tell how it was made and what made it, but do not know who was there. One thing we do know: no where is the destructive course of time and the ruthless hands of the invader more visible than on those old walls. The Abbey was probably destroyed in the reign of Henry the VIII, during Cromwell's wars.

The old ivy covered walls and gables now standing, the wilderness of the landscape surrounding, and the profound stillness convince the visitor at once that Netley Abbey properly ranks among the grandest ruins in the world. The old winding stairway was closed, or we should have scaled the walls; but when our guide told us that one or two years ago a young lady had gone up, fell down, and was killed, and that the avenue had been closed to prevent further accident, our regrets were changed to thanks. Every vestige of the stained glass has been removed; but there is still remaining a portion of the tessellated tile which covered the floor, which reveals an art that now seems to be lost to the world. By paying our guide a shilling we were permitted to take a small fragment of this tile with us. We left it with many regrets believing it will pay any one visiting the south of England to go and see Netley Abbey. On our return to Southampton we took a survey of

THE ROYAL VICTORIA HOSPITAL, which was on our way, and about one mile from the Abbey, and 3½ miles from Southampton. This building is 1420 feet or over ¼ of a mile in length; the architecture is Italian and was erected by her Majesty Queen Victoria in 1856, immediately after the Crimean war. It is built of brick and stone at a cost of over 3,000,000 pounds.

Three thousand sick soldiers are landed here every year; and it is the head quarters of the Medical Staff. Attached to the Hospital is a Literary Museum and Lunatic Asylum. The ground on which it is situated contains 250 acres, beautifully ornamented, and adorned with evergreens, fruits, and other trees, and shrubbery, together with monuments and statues, which gives the whole an attractive as well as lonesome appearance. It was this place that suggested to me, that in England the great effort is to preserve antiquities and nature, and in America the strife is to supersede the beauties of nature scenery with the monotony of art. The museum of skulls and sections of the human body, distorted by disease, it ghastly and revolting to the finer feelings, certainly forms one of the most interesting, if not attractive features of this institution.

The Quay at Southampton contain a small saluting battery, of seven guns among which we noticed one which, according to the inscription, had been presented to the citizens of Southampton by Henry the VIII. It is a rude piece of mechanism; but when we considered that it was here by the hands and mind, of that monarch, who lived over three hundred years ago, and created such communion as well as sorrow in the world, it became an object of great interest to us.

December the 4th, visited

WINCHESTER CATHEDRAL. This is located at Winchester, and is said to be the oldest in the kingdom. It was built in the year A. D. 980. On entering this grand old structure, I was immediately impressed with the idea that I ought to take off my hat, or rather cap, for I did not have a hat on; but noticing that my English cousin did not take off his, I presumed that was the rule, that we could enter this sepulchre without the usual formality of taking off our hats. We were however soon met by a sacred looking man whose appearance impressed us with the idea that he had just come from the tombs, or had been resurrected from the dead, who asked us politely, yet solemnly, if we would take off our hats. Immediately putting my hand to my head I found that I had only a skull cap, and having seen during religious service in America, churchmen of my age wear their skull caps, during service: the first impulse was to resist this indignity. A little reflection however prompted me to take off my tiny cap, which I deliberately put in my coat pocket. At this moment I heard my companion inquire why the necessity of this formality: he could not see that this place was any better than any other place. Our sacred looking gentleman said that was true, but that the rule of the place demanded it, and we must obey. Having now been posted in the rules, we followed our guide through the nave into the main chapel, to the altar, and were shown a beautiful painting, executed by Benjamin West, of America. In the right and left of this chapel, elevated above the floor, are the remains of the following dignitaries: Ethelwolf, father of Alfred the Great, Hardianute, and his father Canute; Also, William Rufus, son of William the Conqueror, who was so ruthlessly dealt with, lies here sleeping. Surrounded by these ancient worthies; something of the same feeling crept over one, that usually attends modest men, in the presence of dignitaries—I felt sleepy. Leaving our distinguished company, we were conducted to a small apartment, which contains Queen Mary's chair, and toilet table. We could not have resisted the temptation of taking a seat immediately; but after close examination found that an almost invisible picket fence intervened, which rendered it entirely inaccessible to common humanity, so that we had to take our leave, without this distinguished honor, or even to get a chip of the chair to preserve as a memorial of our visit. Solemn reflection however convinced us, that if every impudent American were allowed to do as he pleased with these old relics, which like Lot's wife have become almost sacred, by time: they would soon lose their interest, if not become invisible to the naked eye. With many solemn reflections and regrets we now left this venerable building, for a visit to

ST CROSS HOSPITAL.

This was erected by Henry De Blois, Bishop of Winchester, and Brother of King Stephen, in the year 1136. The Lodge of St. Cross seems to be the most interesting feature of the building, whither we were conducted by a youth of 90 summers. Here is a beautiful altar and 'essellated pavement, for permission to stand on which our guide told us one sympathetic gentleman visitor had paid 3000 pounds equal to $15,000; the bait was too big for us to bite at. The only relic that I remember of seeing here, was the table of King Stephen, out of which is marble and elliptical in form. This we were not allowed to touch. Determined to have a relic, we could discover nothing but a small bit of common glass, hanging loose in one of the windows, which we appropriated, and now carefully preserve. With our company we now returned to Southampton.

To Be Continued.

—Tame geese with remarkably red feet navigate Yellow River.

—The Valparaiso Vidette says, that a law was passed, by the last Legislature, which authorizes the sheriffs to advertise sales in any newspaper in the county, without regard to the location of the land advertised. The Vidette says that the Plymouth Democrat originated the law, and had it introduced by our Representative.

—Mr. McKinstry, a very worthy gentleman, who was the Democratic candidate for sheriff of Miami county, has bought a farm in this vicinity, and is now a citizen of Marshall county. We heard the remark made, that Mr. McKinstry was too good a man to be elected sheriff of Miami county.

—The business affairs of the city of Plymouth have been conducted as economically as any young city in the State. Good and wholesome laws have been enacted by the city council. Street and other improvements have been made, and all at comparatively small cost. The city is out of debt, and we hope it will remain so. Almost if not quite every city in the State is heavily taxed, to pay interest on bonds issued to make some costly improvement. Our city Fathers have shown good sense, and desire a to serve the interest of tax payers in their economical administration.

—The new liquor law is a total prohibition in less quantities than a quart at a time in this state, until the next session of the county board, which regularly will not be till June. In this respect the law is more severe, we think in its restriction than the Baxter Law, or any other we have ever had. It also disallows a druggist to retail for gain even though the liquor be designed for medicine. The only way a druggist can sell less than a quart must be to sell at cost, and not for gain by profit. So at least it seems to read. It also seems to prohibit one from giving any minor, even his own child a drink of wine or beer, at his own house. Perhaps however no such strict construction was intended. Questions of construction will arise to be determined by the courts.—Valparaiso Vidette.

Born—on Wednesday last to Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Kendall, a son—weight 8 lbs.

—We are sorry to learn that Mr. George Gregg has determined to remove from Plymouth, to Batavia, Ill. Mr. Gregg is a good citizen. Mrs. Gregg has many warm friends in this place, who will miss her from social gatherings, and Church and Sabbath school meetings. She has been the organist in the Methodist church in this city for some time, and her absence from church and choir, will be keenly felt by the choir and regular attendants of the Methodist church.

—South Bend business men have found it unsafe to trust their funds and accounts to young men with extravagant habits. Some men cannot resist the temptation to gratify their passions and appetites, at the expense of their employers.

—As an evidence of a revival of business, we notice that merchants and manufacturers in many of our neighboring towns and cities have commenced advertising freely in their local papers.

—Yellow River has not been frozen over at this place, more than two or three days at a time this winter. Springs along the river pour floods of water far above freezing temperature in the stream constantly.

—When will the fierce winter winds subside and the gentle life giving southern breezes come?

—Carbido-spinal meningitis prevails to an alarming extent in Elkhart, many deaths have resulted from malignant attacks of the disease. Sudden and extreme changes of weather are supposed to produce the disease.

—Miss Anna Whitmore has gone to Valparaiso.

—Miss Mima Bender is visiting friends at Burroak Flats. She will give instructions on the piano to a few young ladies in that locality.

—Prof. Geo. O. Work was in this city a few days last week, but has returned to Argos where he is teaching music.

—SCRIBNER'S MONTHLY magazine for April has made its appearance on our table. It is an excellent number of that deservedly popular magazine.

—Mrs. Susan M. Hurd, wife of Orlando Hurd, died on the 9th of March, at her home in Mishawaka. She was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and one of the members of the class formed in 1835. She was married to Orlando Hurd on the first day of November 1821. All the old settlers of Northern Indiana who visited Mishawaka as early as 1837, will remember Orlando Hurd's Tavern.

—Rev. James H. Ross, died at his residence six miles north of Zionsville, Boone county, on the 19th inst, aged 77 years. He was licensed preacher of the M. E. church fifty four years.

—ST. NICHOLAS the finest magazine for the young folks published in this country has made its appearance for April. The "Eight Cousins" is delightful reading for the children.

—GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK, the reliable fashion magazine, is out early, for April. A writer has recently been trying to prove that the Atlantic Ocean is drying up. Freezing over more likely.

—We have heard the names of C. H. Reeve and Amasa Johnson mentioned in connection with the office of Mayor of Plymouth. We do not know that they are candidates. There will probably be candidates for all the city offices before the election takes place.

—Wm. Baxter has had more curses heaped upon his head, by the enemies of temperance reform than any other man in the State of Indiana. Whether he was wise or not, in his efforts to restrain, by law, the traffic in ardent spirits, he was certainly unselfish, and acted with the purest motives. He had nothing to gain but the welfare of the people, by laboring to prevent intemperance. If the license law will be a better promoter of temperance than the Baxter law, the people will have reason to rejoice.

—In nearly every town and city there are some fortune seekers who are making preparations to go to the Black Hills for gold, as soon as spring opens. The military authorities are determined to prevent them from getting there.

—The last legislature enacted one law which shows that the members were easily galled, or that they desired to add expense to litigants and tax payers without conferring upon them the slightest benefit. Delinquent land lists sheriff's sales, administrator's notices and all official notices now required by the counties to be published, must now be published in a German paper, as well as English, in counties having 15,000 population, provided there be a German paper published in the county. This doubles a heavy expense to many who are but poorly able to stand it.

—Judge Corbin having been appointed circuit Judge, has resigned the office of Mayor of Plymouth. Amasa Johnson, Esq., was chosen President of the city council. W. Kelley, Esq., acts as city Judge.

—We have heard that some of our citizens who paid their money to see the can can, at the hall one night last week, were considerably disappointed. There were but two ladies in the troop and they were dressed like decent women.

—Mr. T. A. Hogan, of this place, has just finished sawing at his saw mill, a black walnut tree from which he obtained the enormous amount of 5,927 feet of lumber. The following is the scale of each log—7 in number—and the number of feet obtained from each:

10x25	835
12x25	275
12x42	1,082
12x40	973
12x43	1,141
12x45	1,362
12x39	919

Total no. of feet.....5,927
This is the "boss" black walnut tree and we should like to hear of its equal.—Valparaiso New Yorker.

—Andy Johnson, U. S. Senator, for Tennessee, is making himself as conspicuous and disagreeable in the Senate, as he was accustomed to in days of yore.

—No public school in Plymouth this week. Teachers and scholars are enjoying the fine weather during vacation.

—The heat of the sun asserts its power, whenever it can get a chance to shine, in spite of the north wind, but our people are not running around, without their coats, very much, even at mid day.

—Look out for the largest and best stock of Dry Goods, clothing, &c., all of the latest style, at the store of Becker & Wolf, between the two hardware stores. Mr. Wolf has gone east for the purpose of purchasing a new stock of spring and summer goods, while goods are cheap and plenty. Their stock of goods now on hand is large and suited to the wants of the people. Prices to suit the times.
